About myself	Remi is a British educator with more than 20 years of experience, whose unique approach to teaching combines fundamental academic training with methods of acting and creative development. As an internationally recognized award-winning actor, director and playwright, he uses his professional skills to create engaging and effective lessons. His experience coaching children and mentoring professional actors makes him an ideal mentor who not only teaches language, but also develops confidence, creativity and public speaking skills in students of any age. Since 2012, I have worked professionally as an actor, director, and writer, touring both nationally and internationally. My experience spans across stage and education, having coached children aged 3 to 18 in preparation for LAMDA examinations and entry into various UK drama schools. I continue to mentor professional actors working in the West End, television, and film. I also run my own theatre company dedicated to working with children, nurturing creativity and performance skills from a young age.

More recently, here in Dubai, I am directing the play Lungs with Dubai Drama Group and have been invited to judge the prestigious “Short and Sweet” theatre festival. I have also joined the Drama Dubai Group committee, where I focus on nurturing emerging talent and providing expert coaching. Additionally, I’ve been honoured with multiple invitations to judge the renowned theatre festival at the University of Manchester.
